Leprosy in Colombian children and adolescents.
Romero-Montoya IM, Beltrán-Alzate JC, Ortiz-Marín DC, Diaz-Diaz A, Cardona-Castro N.

Author information
1From the Instituto Colombiano de Medicina Tropical, Universidad CES, Sabaneta, Antioquia; and Universidad CES, Fellowship in Pediatric Infectious Diseases, Medellín, Colombia.

Abstract
While leprosy is not considered a public health problem in Colombia, affected children are an important warning sign, demonstrating the challenge of controlling the disease. Herein, we report 12 cases of leprosy in patients 5-17 years of age, summarizing our clinical, microbiological and treatment findings.

PMID: 24030349 [PubMed - in process]